COMMUNITIES

together with Hospital and Medical Facilities of those Communities.

U. S. WAR INDUSTRIES BOARD ,
SECTION OF MEDICAL INDUSTRIES,
LT. COL. F. F. SIMPSON, CHIEF.

PREFACE

It became apparent that there would be a very marked shortage of doctors in most communities of the country because such a large number entered the Army, Navy, Public Health Service, or Red Cross activities and were taken from their own communities.

The shortage would be particularly acute where important war industries developed and brought in great flow of labor.

It was further apparent that with shortage of facilities for caring for the sick and wounded of industry and of the civilian population, the time was fast approaching when a decision should be reached regarding the allocation of medical services and attention to such purposes as were most vital to the one absorbing activity of winning the war.

With the foregoing ideas in view, there has been assembled in the following pages for the states in New England, and for the state of New York, a comprehensive group picture showing the industries in those states which were accorded the highest rate of Priority and Preferential treatment because they were looked upon as being the industries most vital to winning the war. The arrangement is as follows:

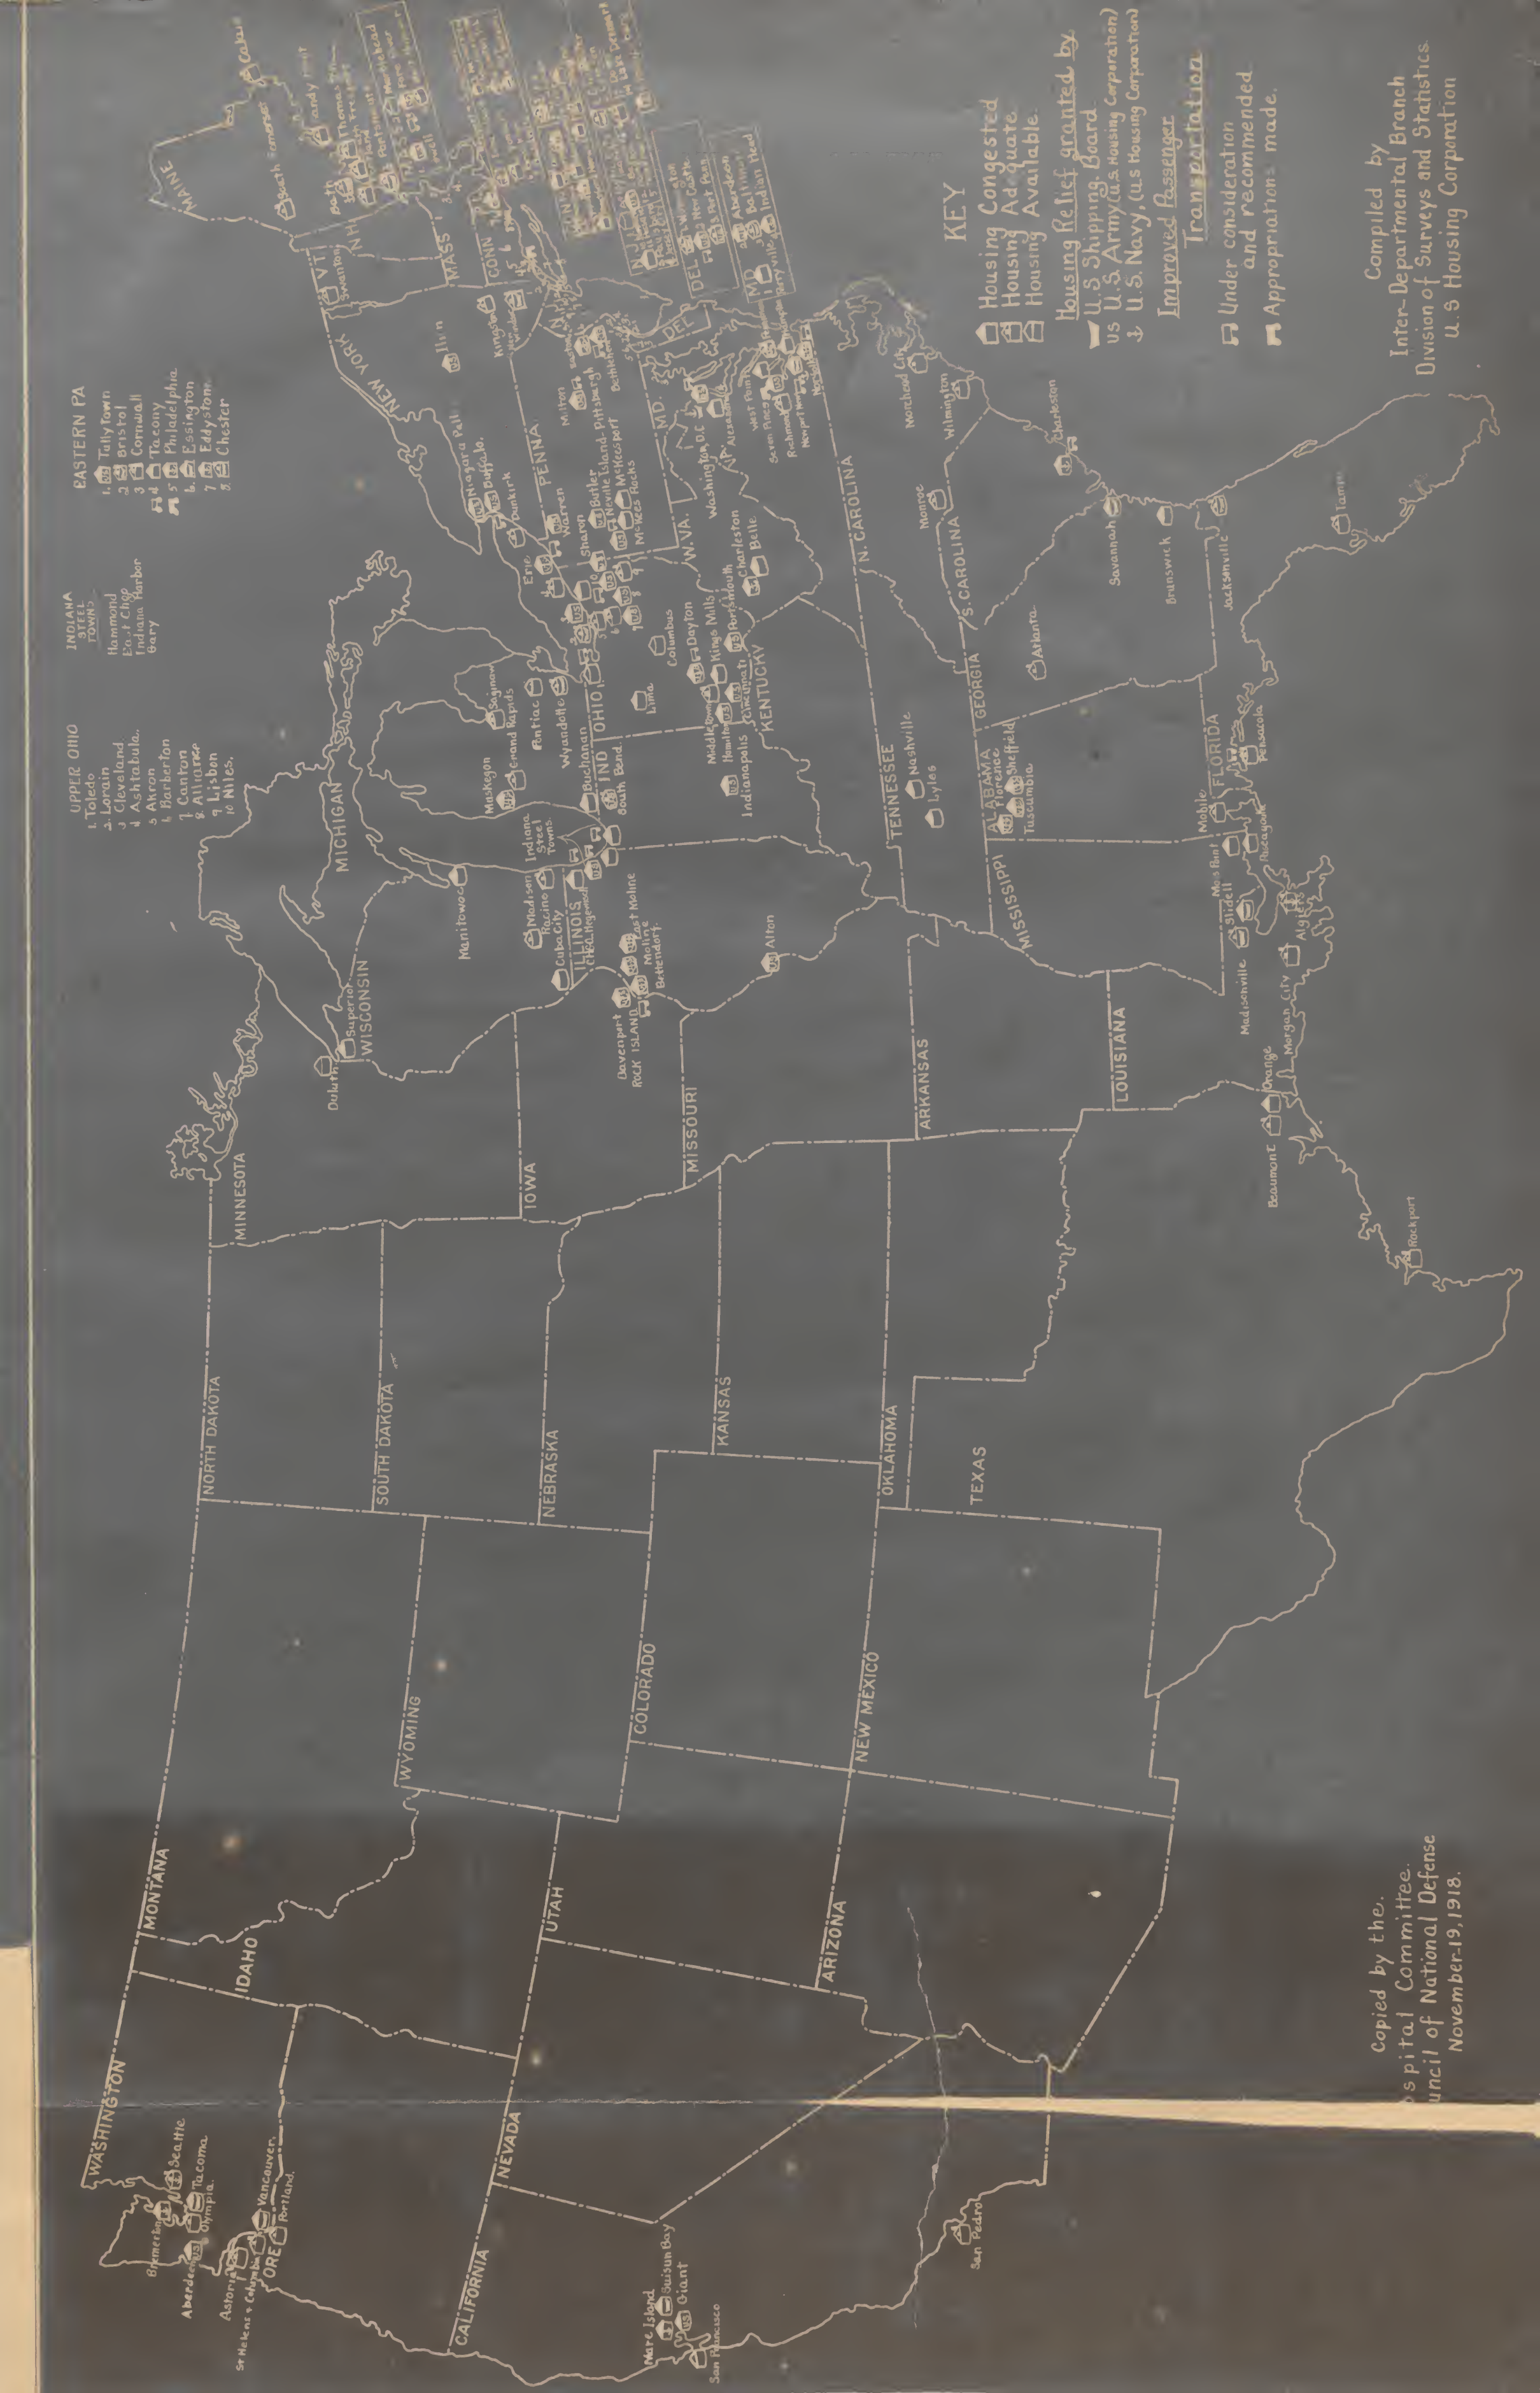

- A. The industrial centers of each state are arranged alphabetically.
- B. The suburbs of these industrial centers are grouped in alphabetical order under the respective industrial centers to which they are tributary.
- C. The individual plants are arranged alphabetically under the towns in which they are located.
- D. The next column shows the pre-war population and, where possible, the population as of October 1, 1918; thus showing in as many instances as possible the influx of war workers.
- E. The next three columns show the number of hospitals, the name of each hospital, and the number of beds in each hospital.
- F. The remaining two columns show the total number of doctors in a given community before war began and the number who entered one or another of the governmental services.

We thus have a community picture of the industries vital to winning the war, of the hospital situation in the several communities, and of the shortage of doctors.

It was our purpose to make such survey of the entire United States in connection with industries having highest Priority rating; and next to make similar surveys for other industries of varying importance, so that it would be possible for the Public Health Service, or local health officers, to know which industries were considered most important in the war program, with the idea that these industries should naturally receive the best medical attention as well as the preferential rating in matters of fuel, transportation, raw materials, labor, etc.
